

BLAUT CASE CLOSED.

Schedule Incomplete When He Swore to the June, '93, Report.

Declines to Tell of Automaton Piano Stock as a Bonus for a Loan.

Lawyer Lauterbach Begins Summing Up for the Defense.

Defendant Joseph F. Blaut, charged with perjury in falsely swearing to the quarterly report of the Madison Square Bank as its president in June, 1933, was heard by Judge Barrett in the court of oyer and terminer this morning. He mopped his brow nervously and was not near so placid as collected on other days of his trial as found him.

And he had much cause for his plainly apparent perturbation. He knew that the attorneys for the prosecution would subject him to a cross-examination, and an intimation had gone abroad that the reckless bank's ex-president would experience a mercurial "sidetracking."

Assistant District Attorney Vernon M. Davis, who has handled the case since thus far so ably, conducted the cross-examination of ex-president Blaut. It was expected that District Attorney Fellows would do so, but he has familiarized himself with the bank's files as has his assistant, Mr. Davis. Proceedings opened on time at 10:30 o'clock. Defendant Blaut was called at the bar by Mr. Davis, and he took the oath. The court, District Attorney Fellows came in hurriedly.

Mr. Blaut, who was a member of the committee of the Madison Square Bank, asked Mr. Davis to state the nature of the evidence against him. He was asked to state the nature of the evidence against him.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN CROWDED WITH ADMIRERS OF THE BARBERS.

If there are any doubters that the dog show of the season in this city should have been at the Madison Square Garden this morning and seen the crowd on the floor within an hour after the doors opened.

Connoisseurs visit the show before the current, and can easily be distinguished from those who come to see the show.

Many dogs take prizes. The Madison Square Garden was crowded with admirers of the barbers.

SCHATTENKIRK ON TRIAL.

Commissioner Sheehan Listens to Mrs. Jennie Hag's Story.

She Swears the Policeman Grossly Insulted Her.

An Investigation to Be Made to Place the Blame.

The officers and crew of the wrecked United States corvette Kearsarge arrived safely in port at 11:30 o'clock this morning on board the Pacific Mail line steamer City of Para.

Schattenkirk was also charged with conduct unbecoming a policeman and with trying to influence Mrs. Hag to make a light case against Hackman Elward L. Hommedieu, who, on the same morning, she alleges, attempted to extort from her husband a large sum of money.

Schattenkirk pleaded not guilty. Lawyer Louis Grant appeared for him. Mrs. Hag was the first witness called.

She is a handsome brunette. Her husband is a bartender at 331 Ninth avenue. Mrs. Hag testified that on the morning of Feb. 11, 1933, she called at 333 West Thirty-third street, Policeman Schattenkirk came up the steps and asked her what she wanted.

She told him that she wanted to see her husband. He told her that her husband was not at home. She told him that she wanted to see her husband.

MRS. ROSENFELD TESTIFIES.

Playwright's Wife Examined in Supplementary Proceedings.

Has No Houses and Only a Few Dollars in Bank.

The examination of Mrs. Genie H. Rosenfeld, wife of playwright Eugene Rosenfeld, in supplementary proceedings of a suit for collection on three notes, aggregating $174, was held in Lawyer Maurice Meyer's office, in the Pulitzer Building, today.

The suit is brought by Isaac S. Plaut, of the Hotel Vendome, and relates to the failure of the "Fidelio" bank. When this opera was put on at the Casino, Samuel Roke, Assistant Secretary of the Colony Island Yacht Club, loaned Rosenfeld $1,000, taking five notes in exchange. These he gave Plaut in payment for board.

The note was not honored, and Mr. Plaut began action. Subsequently Mrs. Rosenfeld refused to cooperate from a mortgage of $100 each. These were also dishonored, and a judgment was obtained.

Plaut yesterday issued an order for Mrs. Rosenfeld, who is supposed to possess property, to appear in court to answer to the judgment. She was accompanied by her sister, Miss Dorothy Johnson, and her husband, Ludwig, who had two servants and a horse and buggy.

A mortgage, which was held by Mr. Plaut, was presented to her in court. She used to own the house in Ludlow street, which she had mortgaged to him for $1,000 and assuming the mortgage.

She has received $100 up to the present, and is now paying $100 a month. The furniture in the house was sold to her sister, Lillian Johnson, of 144th street, who is now in the hands of a creditor.

STOCKS FEEL SENATE DELAY.

Moderate Advances on Covering of Short Contracts.

The few visitors who strayed into the galleries of the Stock Exchange this morning were hardly aware that business was being transacted, and after looking on for a few minutes went away disgusted.

Their feelings were shared by the members themselves, the market having been even more lull than on any day for weeks. The time of the day, however, was being transacted, and after looking on for a few minutes went away disgusted.

The inactivity is generally ascribed to the delay on the part of the Senate in acting on the tariff question.
